Welcome to the Excitement of Fenway Park!!!

New England baseball fans have always appreciated the specialness of Fenway Park, but now, through the magic of national television, fans from all over the nation have learned why it's the most exciting place to see a baseball game in the major leagues.

It has become common for visitors from distant states, even in the dead of winter, to ask to be allowed to see the famous green wall and the unique angles and corners and to understand how close Red Sox fans are to the action on the field.

For the record, Fenway Park was first constructed in 1912, and then rebuilt by the late Tom Yawkey in 1934. Basically, however, the playing field today is the same as it was over 40 years ago. The box on this page furnishes other facts about the park for your further information.

After two years experience, we believe our message board has added another enjoyable dimension and a new source of information for Fenway fans, and we repeat our promise it will not be "gimmicked" with anything not connected with baseball.

On behalf of the members of our staff listed below, we thank you for coming and we know you will enjoy your stay.

The Manager . . .

DONALD WILLIAM (ZIM) ZIMMER

Age: 47; Born: January 17, 1931, Cincinnati, Ohio. Ht.: 5'9"; Wt.: 185 lbs. Green eyes, Brown hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Treasure Island, Fla. Married Jean Carol Bauerle. Children: Thomas 6/30/52, Donna 3/14/54.

Zimmer's first full season as Red Sox manager was exciting and successful. The Red Sox went down to their final game before losing the pennant chase to the Yankees and finished in a tie for second place with the Orioles. The 97-64 record included the team's most wins since 1946, and the best percentage (.602) since 1950. Zimmer's record of 138-98 (.586) is 5th all-time among Red Sox managers.

Don was the Red Sox third base coach for two and one-half years before replacing Darrell Johnson July 19, 1976. He was noted throughout his career as a hustling, aggressive player and the Red Sox have been that way as a team under his tutelage.

Zimmer started his pro career in 1949 in the Dodger system as a shortstop. In 1953 he was leading the American Association in homers (23) and RBI (63) at St. Paul when he was struck in the head by Jim Kirk of Columbus July 7, 1953 and missed the rest of the season. In 1954 he began a 12-year major league career with the Dodgers, Cubs, Mets, Reds and Washington Senators. He had to overcome another injury when he got a cheek bone fracture June 23, 1956 on a pitch from Hal Jeffcoat of the Reds that again disabled him for the year.

On October 10, 1961 Don was selected by the Mets from the Cubs in the N.L. Expansion Draft. He was with the Senators for three years and then played with the Toei Flyers in 1966 in Japan. During his major league stay he played second, third, shortstop, the outfield and even caught 35 games for the Senators.

He became a minor league manager in 1967 in the Reds organization. In 1971 he moved up to third base coach with the Montreal Expos. Don started 1972 in the same capacity for San Diego and then succeeded Preston Gomez in April as manager. He led the Padres through 1973 and joined the Red Sox after that season.

The Coaches . . .

WALTER JOHN (WALT) HRINIAK

Age: 34, Turns 35 May 22; Born: May 22, 1943, Natick, Mass. Ht.: 5'11"; Wt.: 178 lbs. Green eyes, Blond hair. Bats: Left; Throws: Right. Home: No. Andover, Mass. Married Patricia Ann Doherty. Children: Jill 2/11/77.

Hriniak established himself as a hard-working, efficient bullpen coach last year, his first with the Red Sox. He has earned a reputation as one of the best batting practice pitchers in baseball. Walter had an extensive background as a player, coach and manager before joining the Red Sox. He managed Montreal's Rookie team at Lethbridge, Alb., Canada in the Pioneer League in 1976 after starting the year as a coach with Denver. In 1974-75 he was first base coach with the Expos, following two years as manager of their Jamestown team in the NYP League.

Hriniak, a native of Natick, Mass., signed a substantial bonus contract with the Milwaukee Braves in 1961. At Natick H.S. he was an All Scholastic choice as a baseball shortstop, football quarterback and hockey center. He had a 13-year pro career that included two years with the Braves and Padres in 1968-69 as a catcher. In 1970 he played for Zimmer at Salt Lake City.

JOHN MICHAEL (JOHNNY) PESKY

Age: 58, Turns 59 Sept. 27; Born: September 27, 1919, Portland, Ore. Ht.: 5'9"; Wt.: 170 lbs. Brown eyes, Brown hair. Bats: Left; Throws: Right. Home: Swampscott, Mass. Married Ruth Hickey. Children: David 12/19/52.

The terms popular and versatile apply to Pesky. Now in his fourth year as first base coach, he has been a player, coach, manager and radio-TV announcer for the Red Sox. He's a long-time favorite of Red Sox fans in the New England area and has worked for the team in the off-season selling program advertising.

Johnny was an outstanding shortstop, third baseman and all-around hitter. He holds the Red Sox records for most hits by a rookie (205) and most singles in a season (172) and hit over .300 six times in his major league career. After 10 years with Boston, Detroit and Washington, Pesky coached under Ralph Houk in Denver in 1955 and managed in the Detroit farm system from 1956 through 1960. In the mid-1960's he was a coach for the Pirates and a manager in their system before joining the Red Sox broadcast crew in 1969. He spent six years as part of the radio and television team. He also managed Seattle for the Red Sox in 1961-62 before moving up to the parent Boston team in 1963-64.

ALVIN NEIL (AL) JACKSON

Age: 42; Born: December 25, 1935, Waco, Tex. Ht.: 5'10"; Wt.: 170 lbs. Brown eyes, Black hair. Bats and Throws: Left. Home: Dix Hills, N.Y. Married Nadine C. Simmons. Children: Reginald 10/15/58, Barry 2/9/61.

Al is in his second year as the Red Sox pitching coach. A hard-throwing left-hander during a 10-year career in the National League, Jackson also developed into a knowledgeable student of pitching. From 1970 through 1976 he was a pitching instructor in the New York Mets system. During his major league career he compiled a 67-99 record with a 3.98 ERA. His best years were with the Cardinals in 1966 (13-15, 2.51) and 1967 (9-4, 3.95). He did not pitch in the 1967 World Series against the Red Sox.

Jackson was chosen the outstanding player in Texas while pitching for Moore H.S. in Waco in 1954. He also won four letters as a football quarterback and two in track. He attended Willey College in Marshall, Tex. in the off-season he's an account executive for Schley Shipping in New York. He was selected by the Mets in the 1961 Expansion Draft.

EDWARD FRED JOSEPH (EDDIE) YOST

Age: 51; Born: October 13, 1926, Brooklyn, N.Y. Ht.: 5'10"; Wt.: 180 lbs. Blue eyes, Brown hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Hauppauge, N.Y. Married Pat Healy. Children: Felita 1/13/62, Michael 11/12/63, Alexis 5/3/65.

Eddie has been acclaimed as one of the best third base coaches in baseball. He lived up to that billing in 1977 and is in his second season with the Red Sox, after a 14-year coaching tenure with the Washington Senators and New York Mets.

"The Walking Man," as he was known during his 17-year major league career, was an outstanding third baseman and leadoff hitter. He came from the campus of New York U. to the Senators in 1944 and went on to set several records for third basemen. He led the A.L. six times in walks, had over 100 walks eight times, scored over 100 runs five times and twice led the league in fielding. He still holds the A.L. record of 28 home runs as leadoff batter.

He was traded from Washington to Detroit in Dec. of 1958 and was selected by the Angels in baseball's first expansion draft, Dec. 14, 1960. When Yost retired after the 1962 season he held the major league record for most games at third base (2,008) and the A.L. marks for putouts (2,356), assists (3,659) and chances (6,015). He was selected for the A.L. All Star team in 1952 but did not play. He has a Master's Degree in Physical Education from N.Y.U.

As much a part of baseball as peanuts, popcorn, and crackerjack are the colorful nicknames the players were often given. We know they were acquired for many reasons — the part of the country the man came from, his physical appearance, some characteristic peculiar to the individual, or for seemingly no reason at all. The list presented here is not a complete list of the nicknames of all Red Sox players, but you will find a good cross section of the most colorful ones by which our heroes were known. They range from an Indian to a spaceman and include a cat, a duck, a catfish, a bird, a rooster, a moose, and a grandma. Have a few laughs and enjoy them. Researched by Ed Walton for his book, "THIS DATE IN RED SOX HISTORY" ($7.95), published April 14, 1978 by Stein and Day.

JIM RICE

The Boston Strong Man

By JOE GIULIOTTI
Boston Herald American

When Ed Rice was playing on the sandlots of Anderson, South Carolina, people watched in amazement at the power of the young man and his ability to hit a baseball.

Today, Jim Rice is in the big leagues where players, coaches and managers marvel at his talents swinging the bat.

At 24, Rice who was known as Ed until he left his hometown of 40,000 to play professional baseball, is regarded as the most feared righthanded hitter in the game.

When he was growing up and hitting baseballs over .400 feet while in grammar school, Rice had two idols, Willie Mays and Hank Aaron.

Today, Aaron, the major league home run king, is one of Rice's biggest fans and has gone on record as saying if anyone is going to surpass his big league mark it will be The Boston Strong Man.

"He has potential. There's no telling what he's going to do. You don't have to watch him very long to know he's going to be a great hitter," was Aaron's comment back in 1975, Rice's first full season with the Red Sox.

At that time, Aaron also predicted Rice would, someday, be a .300 hitter. "I never saw a ball jump off anybody's bat the way it does his," he added.

Jim Palmer, the great Baltimore Orioles righthander has stated Rice will be the next American Leaguer to hit 50 home runs; Joe Rudi claims he's one of the finest long ball hitters in the league and his manager, Don Zimmer claims the only man he's seen who came close to being as powerful as Rice was Mickey Mantle.

Rice's feats last year made him a candidate for the league's most valuable player, but, because he was used almost exclusively as a designated hitter, it hurt his chances in the voting. The fact he got as much support as he did is really another tribute to him.

Ralph Houk, who watched Rice personally destroy his Detroit team in their last four games at Fenway Park last season (three homers, eight RBI) said he would have voted for Jim.

"If the man does the job and knocks in big runs during the stretch run why shouldn't he deserve the MVP award. I know he didn't play much in the field but he was playing within the rules as designated hitter, did the job and did it well," the Tigers' manager said.

To list Rice's achievements and titanic home runs would fill the pages of the Sunday New York Times.

He's hit so many long ones that they tend to become routine. However, one he crushed in July of 1975 will always be remembered.

The Boston Strong Man

It came off Kansas City's Steve Busby and was called by the late Tom Yawkey as probably "the longest ever hit out of Fenway Park." The ball sailed over the center field fence to the right of the flagpole. When it disappeared into the night, it was higher than the pole.

Ironically, it came after Busby had struck him out five consecutive times with ease. "That's the kind of hitter I am," Rice explained then and still claims to be. "The pitcher is going to make me look bad but when he makes a mistake, I'm going to make him look bad."

There have been many, mighty Rice homers, including another in County Stadium, Milwaukee, that came within three rows of being the first ever hit out of the park yet he claims he hasn't really caught one.

"You'll be the first to know," he told me one night after saying he "didn't get all of it" when he clouted one out of sight. "No, I'm wrong. You'll be the third. I'll be the first and the pitcher will be the second."

Rice's success in the big leagues comes as no surprise to those who coached him in high school, American Legion and minor League ball.

Joe Morgan, his manager in Triple A at Pawtucket, was asked about Rice early in his rookie year. "Jim Rice has the potential to be the greatest righthanded hitter the Red Sox ever had," was his reply.

A lot of baseball people thought Morgan was going a bit overboard making a statement like that. Those who knew Rice simply smiled in agreement.

John W. Moore was Rice's first baseball coach at Westside High. "He was gifted with the ability to play baseball. From the time he started to play he did nothing but get better. But, more than that, he always was and always will be a super person," he said.

Moore said Rice hit so many balls as a youngster that it became routine. "Just as people do now, we always expected him to bust one. I remember we were playing a game and he slashed one over a big oak tree in dead center field that must have travelled over 500 feet."

Joe Hazel was his American Legion coach. "I heard a lot of stories about his hitting that were hard to believe. But, when I saw him, I knew he would make the big leagues."

When JIM RICE hit three home runs in Fenway Park Aug. 29 vs. Oakland he was the first Red Sox player to do so at home since Norm Zauchin May 27, 1955. Ted Williams (twice in 1957), Ken Harrelson (1968), Joe Lahoud (1969), Fred Lynn (1975) and Carl Yastrzemski (1976) hit three in a game in between, but they were all on the road.

The Boston Strong Man

Surprising as it may seem, Jim Rice is not trying for home runs when he's at bat. "I want to be a .300 hitter. I'm just up there trying to make contact. If they pitch me away, I don't try and pull the ball."

Carl Yastrzemski, no stranger when it comes to hitting, made a good observation on Rice's improvement at the plate last year. "He gave the pitchers strikes, and that's something he didn't do his first two years. Last season, if he didn't like it, he wasn't swinging even though it was in the strike zone."

In this day and age when it seems ballplayers are bickering about one thing or another, Rice is a refreshing change. He never complains. He does his work, looks at the lineup card and even though he seldom gets to play in the field, wears a big smile and says nothing.

Rice would be a regular leftfielder on any other club in baseball but here he's forced to play behind the best left fielder in the game, Yastrzemski.

"Sure I'd like to play every day but how am I or anybody else going to play left field like Yaz. My job is the designated hitter and whatever the skipper says, I do," Rice has said on more than one occasion this season.

Rice's strength is the talk of baseball. In a game in Detroit in '75, he checked his swing and the bat broke from the force with the top half winding up past third base.

Ken Harrelson tells a story of playing golf with Rice. "I let him use my driver that had a strong shaft. As he swung down on the ball, the force behind the swing snapped it in half before he hit the ball.

"Right now, he hits a golf ball longer than the biggest hitter on the pro tour. His strength is just unbelievable," the Hawk added.

Even though Rice was enjoying his finest season, he continually kept working at his hitting. "Many days he would be out under the center field stands in the portable batting area watching as he swung at 75-100 balls," said coach John Pesky. "And, even though he was hitting as well as anybody, if I made a suggestion, he took it. That's why he's such a good hitter and why he's going to get better."

Like his teammates, Rice desperately wants to get into a playoff and World Series. "I didn't get the chance in 1975 because of the broken hand. I want to be in a playoff soon and be a member of a world champion."

That's Jim Rice, a Red Sox super star and, more important, a super human being. He's going to be around hitting those massive home runs for a long, long time. At 25, he hasn't come close to reaching his peak. It's hard to imagine what type of a hitter he will be when he does.

The Real Red Sox

1977 10th Player

By PHIL O'NEILL
Worcester Evening Gazette

When you ask Butch Hobson about his achievements last season, he answers, "I don't think much about individual things . . . I just want to play in a World Series."

That's typical Hobson. The soft-spoken southerner is a team player's team player. And yet, if anyone is looking for one or two or three developments which kept the Red Sox in the thick of the pennant fight last year, you can't look past Butch Hobson.

Hobson's emergence was one of the deciding factors in keeping the Red Sox in the American League East shootout until the final days. Everyone knew at the start of the 1977 season that Butch had to do the job at third base if the Red Sox had a chance, but who expected him to approach 30 home runs and 100 runs batted in?

The 26-year-old did more than produce. He produced in the clutch. In the field and on the bases he performed with a flair, a football flair that delighted the fans and seemed to rouse his teammates. And he did it all with a balky elbow.

"Hard-nosed" is Don Zimmer's word for Butch Hobson.

"You can't get that guy out of the lineup unless he's crippled," said the Red Sox manager. "He's had a sore arm all year. Water on the elbow. A football elbow. Everytime he falls, he lands on it.

"He can't even straighten the arm," continued Zimmer. "I've seen him take swings and flinch. You can do a lot when you have two guys like Hobson and Burleson (Rick) on the same side of the infield."

One of Butch's most impressive plays at third base is a dive into the hole to knock the ball down, then a quick leap to his feet to throw out the runner. The ex-quarterback is not afraid of hitting the dirt.

"He'll always be a knock-down, drag-out guy at third," commented Sox coach Johnny Pesky. "I don't think he'll ever be a smooth-looking third baseman . . . but he gets the job done."

Hobson barreling into second base to break up the double play is another image that sticks in the minds of Red Sox fans. He plays baseball hard, something like the crunching way they play football in his native south.

"I don't regret giving up football," said the thick-necked, well-muscled former Alabama quarterback, who played for Paul "Bear" Bryant's 1972 Orange Bowl team against Nebraska.

His father was also an Alabama quarterback and was the MVP in the 1953 Orange Bowl. He later played baseball briefly in the Indians' farm system.

"I didn't see any future for me in pro football," said the younger Hobson, who was a running quarterback. Butch said that Bryant never got too personal with the Alabama players, although the QBs saw the most of him.

"I've heard from him a few times," said Hobson of Bryant. "He's interested in the Red Sox. Not just because of me. I think he liked this team anyway. He's a great coach. He's a legend down there, has state troopers wherever he goes."

Butch said he grew up with football, but baseball didn't come that easy to him. "I got here by hard work. I'm not a natural. I hustle. I've always done that pretty well."

"I'm not a speed demon on the bases, but I can break up the double play," he continued. "Yeah, I guess I dive for some balls at third that other guys might not try for."

One area (besides batting) where Hobson improved dramatically as the 1977 season wore on was throwing. When Zimmer brought Butch up from Pawtucket for a 90-day trial last season and even at the start of this season, he threw some balls away.

"I have a live arm and I will throw some away," he said then. "I like to get my fingers on the seams," he said about his hesitation before releasing the ball. "It's nice to have a George Scott over there at first base, though."

Hobson almost never erred as the season wore on. The reason? He takes 150 ground balls a day from Pesky. The average is 75 to 100. That dedication apparently paid off.

"In time I would like to cut down on my strikeouts" Hobson said of future years. He led the club in whiffs in this, his first full season. Zimmer poo-poops such talk.

"I've never talked to the man once about striking out," said the manager. "You know, I've seen him strike out a lot, but he never let it upset him, not once.

"He has the perfect temperament for playing this game," praised Zimmer.

Hobson had played winter ball for Licey in the Dominican Republic when he reported to Winter Haven in 1977. He had a good spring, although many of his line drives seemed to be hit right at fielders. It continued that way early last season. He hit the ball hard, but it wasn't dropping in.

It was a tough time, but Butch says his spirits were buoyed by his teammates. "Everyone helped. They might say, 'you looked good on that play,' encourage me like that. Then when I hit a home run, there were 24 guys up in the dugout. There are a lot of great guys on this team."

Then the hits started to fall in. . . and out of Fenway Park. It was a funny thing, but Hobson seemed to hit when the rest of the thundering Red Sox bats fell silent. He filled in the slack admirably.

And he hit in the clutch, as his escalating RBI total and high number of game-winning hits proved. Pressure didn't seem to bother him. He got some big hits early-on in Yankee Stadium and never did stop delivering with men on base.

His righthanded power is made to order for Fenway Park. But as Johnny Pesky points out, Hobson has the strength to hit them out in any park in baseball.

Zimmer, of course, is pleased as punch with Hobson's performance. And he should be. Don gave the young man a great opportunity. And he took a calculated risk doing it, because he was going with untried talent in place of Rico Petrocelli, a veteran very popular throughout New England.

"I told my best buddy before the season a good year for Hobson would be 15 to 18 home runs, 65 RBIs and a .255 or .265 batting average," said Zimmer.

"The man made a liar out of me," grinned the manager.

Hobson's RBI production, in particular, was amazing for a player, who hit from sixth to eighth almost all season. Zimmer moved him up to third for a time late in the year and Hobson continued to deliver, despite the increased pressure.

"It was a little different," said Butch. "Batting third, ahead of Yaz (Carl Yastrzemski), I felt I should try to get on base more and let him and the others drive me in, instead of them being on base for me like it was earlier in the season."

The blocky 6-1, 190-pounder never really lacked for confidence. "I always knew I could hit up here (in the majors)," he said. "If I had any doubts, I wouldn't be here."

What about the elbow? Will it diminish or even shorten his career?

Butch feels he will always be plagued by bone chips in his throwing (right) elbow. "They call it a 'Burser's Elbow,'" he said. "There's fluid in there. If I fall on it or slide on it, it gives me trouble," he said, flexing the arm and demonstrating that he really can't straighten it out.

The aggressive way this former footballer plays baseball, he's bound to have some elbow trouble in the future. Red Sox fans can only hope the days he sits out will be few and far between.

Butch Hobson was one big reason the Red Sox battled the Yankees and Orioles right to the wire. A healthy Hobson in 1978 will go a long way toward making the playoffs and the World Series a reality at Fenway Park this year.

American League Records

That May Never Be Broken

For years it seemed a virtual certainty that Babe Ruth's records would never be broken. To surpass them would be as easy as flying to the moon. Well Roger Maris, Neil Armstrong, and Hank Aaron all came along to prove this wrong. Though the Babe's records have fallen many others still remain that have withstood assault for many years.

One record that looks good for eternity is Lou Gehrig's 2130 consecutive games played between 1925 and 1939. There are few players today willing to shorten their careers by playing injured as Gehrig did just to keep a consecutive game record alive. Lou's 184 RBI's in a season and career 23 grand slam homers also have been around a long time.

Two records that cannot be broken at this time are the homerun records set for pitchers by Wes Ferrell. His nine homers in 1931 and life total of 36 will stand as long as the American League allows a DH for the pitcher.

Modern conditions also protect New York pitcher Jack Chesbro's feat of starting 51 games, completing 48, and winning 41 which he did in the 1904 season. It is also very unlikely that managers would allow pitchers to go 24 innings as Jack Coombs of Philadelphia and Joe Harris of Boston did when they locked horns in the longest game ever played in the A.L. during the 1906 season.

Still another record that will probably be around forever is Connie Mack's feat of managing the Philadelphia A's for 50 years. Connie had one big advantage over present day managers. He owned the team!

Several records on the books might even be insured by conservative old Lloyds of London. These are Ty Cobb's .367 career batting average with three years over .400, Larry Lajoie's .422 mark in 1901, and Cy Young's 751 complete games with 7377 innings pitched.

Records on the books for over 50 years are George Sisler's 257 hits in a season (1920), Sam Rice's 182 singles (1925), Joe Jackson's and Sam Crawford's 26 three baggers in a season, Tris Speaker's career 793 doubles, and Cobb's lifetime 297 triples.

One of baseball's most memorable feats was Joe DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak in 1941. The greatest obstacle to this record is the pressure the player comes under. With the ever constant TV camera on him, the modern player would have to rise above worse pressure than Joe D. had to endure.

Hall of Famer Eddie Collins still holds the A.L. longevity record of 25 years though Brooks Robinson took a good run at it with 23. Another Hall of Famer Joe Sewell struck out 114 times in 14 years. Twice he fanned only four times in a season. Another hard one to beat, especially with the free swingers of today's game.

Long standing homerun marks were set by Hank Greenberg, Joe Gordon, and Al Rosen. Hank's 58 homers in 1938 are tops for first basemen, Gordon's 32 in 1948 leads all second basemen, and Rosen's 37 homers as a rookie and 43 in 1953 are the best for a rookie and third baseman.

Freshman records that have been on the books a long time are Ted Williams' 145 rbi's in 1939, Dale Alexander's .343 average his rookie year in 1929, Ed Summers' 24 wins way back in '08, and Herb Score's 245 strike outs in 1955.

The one record that will stand forever for it can only be tied but never surpassed is Don Larson's incredible feat of pitching a perfect game in the fifth game of the 1956 World Series.

The "Old" Tiant is Coming Back

Luis Tiant leaned his elbows onto the kitchen table of his Milton home one wintry morning last January, slowly sipping a cup of coffee and laughing to himself, as if he had just heard the punch line to a private joke.

Moments earlier, a reporter had asked him if his 12-8 record in 1977 wasn't an indication that time and age had finally caught up with him, and further wondered if Luis wouldn't feel inordinate pressure to get off to a blazing start in 1978?

"Let me tell you something," Tiant said, sounding a bit like a weary parent trying to get a message across for the 10th time. "I know what's going to happen, even before I go down to spring training. People are going to say Tiant is too old. They are going to say he is all washed up. It used to bother me, but it doesn't any more because I've been reading those same stories every year since 1971, and every year I come back to do the job expected of me."

If the spectre of a widely-scrutinized comeback fails to perturb Luis today, that's understandable, for two reasons.

First, he's not quite sure last season was all that disasterous. It was his worst in six years as a Boston starter, to be certain, yet he did lead the staff in starts and strikeouts, and from August 30th on he was 4-0 with a 2.29 ERA.

"It was not the kind of year I should have," he says. "But I'm not going to make any excuses. It's like I've always said, you've got to know how to win in this game, and you've got to know how to lose. If you're bad, you've got to stand up and say so like a man. And I had a lot of bad games last year. If I had to pay $5 to get into the ballpark, I'd have booed myself, too!"

But the main reason Luis isn't reaching for any panic buttons is simply a matter of perspective. After what happened to the man in 1971, it's unlikely one mediocre season could undermine his confidence today.

As far as baseball goes, Luis came back from the dead that year.

He had been a mainstay of the Cleveland staff in the mid-60s, along with Sam McDowell, reaching a peak of popularity in 1968 when he won 21 games and led the league with a 1.60 ERA, even though his Indians hit like pacifists. He beat the Twins 1-0 one night that season, but had to strike out 19 batters and pitch 16 innings to do it. That was the same year Denny McLain was winning 31 for the AL champion Tigers.

by JOE FITZGERALD

It's Easy to Keep Score

Baseball Shorthand, as used by the news media to render every game more enjoyable to baseball enthusiasts. All players are numbered and all plays recorded by symbols. For symbols and example of system, see below:

CODE NUMBER OF PLAYERS AS FOLLOWS

Pitcher	1	Second Baseman	4	Left Fielder	7
Catcher	2	Third Baseman	5	Center Fielder	8
First Baseman	3	Shortstop	6	Right Fielder	9

SYMBOLS FOR PLAYS

Single	—	Fielder's Choice	FC	Passed Ball	PB
Double	==	Hit by Pitcher	HP	Balk	BK
Triple	===	Wild Pitch	WP	Struck Out	K
Home Run	====	Stolen Base	SB	Base on Balls	BB
Reached base on error	E	Sacrifice	SAC	Force Out	FO

The lower lefthand corner of the scoring block should be considered as home plate. Progress is counter-clockwise with progress to first base indicated in lower right-hand corner, to second in upper righthand corner, to third in upper lefthand corner and to home in lower left. In example to left, batter reached first on an error by the second baseman, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball. It is convenient to encircle all runs as shown so that scoring plays may be seen at a glance.

THIS DATE IN BOSTON RED SOX HISTORY by Ed Walton

The Sox are as old as the century, and this is their story. It's a story no Fenway fan will want to miss—and a source book to warm up any meeting of the Hot Stove League—covering every significant event affecting the team, on and off the field. Statistics for every year since 1901, box scores of World Series games and no-hitters, birthdates of all the players—it's a treasury of baseball lore, filled with photos of the greats of yesterday and today.

Tiant is Coming Back . . .

"If Luis pitched for us," Detroit catcher Bill Freehan insisted, "he'd be shooting for 40 wins!"

A year later Tiant got off to a terrible start, losing his first seven decisions as a tightened shoulder muscle destroyed his rhythm. But even when he regained his health, he couldn't offset the woeful hitting and shoddy defense exhibited daily by his mates. The Indians finished sixth in 1969, 46½ games out of the running, and Tiant ended up 9-20.

That winter he was shipped off to Minnesota. For a man used to working with little or no support, the thought of joining Harmon Killebrew, Tony Oliva, Rod Carew and Company was nothing short of ecstasy. Luis couldn't wait for spring of 1970 to roll around.

By late May, he was leading the league with a 6-0 record and well on his way to number seven against Milwaukee when he tried to fire a fastball in the seventh inning and felt a "Pop!" in his shoulder. He left the game, not too concerned, but when he tried to warm up along the sidelines three days later he discovered he couldn't throw a ball more than 10 feet!

The Twins rushed him to an orthopedic specialist who found that Tiant had suffered a fractured scapula, which is the wing bone in the back portion of the shoulder. Publicly the word was that Luis only needed rest, but privately the Twins knew that he might have pitched his last ballgame.

By September, doctors said Luis could put his arm to the test, so he made a few appearances, posting a 1-3 record, but the jury was still out. His future would be determined by what happened in 1971 spring training.

His first game came against the Red Sox in Winter Haven. His control was poor, and midway through the contest he pulled a muscle in his rib cage which kept him out of action for two weeks. He appeared just one more time, giving him a total of eight spring training innings during which he gave up 14 hits and a 7.88 ERA.

The numbers, though they didn't begin to tell the whole story, sealed his fate.

On March 31, 1971, the Twins packed their bags and equipment and waited for the bus which would take them to the airport for a chartered flight north. Tiant's bags were packed, too, when he received a phone call asking him to go immediately to the traveling secretary's room.

When he arrived, the message hit him like a ton of bricks. He was handed an unconditional release, along with formal best wishes. The Twins didn't desire his services any more.

"I'll never forget this as long as I live," Minnesota publicist Tom Mee says. "It was the most forlorn experience I ever had in baseball. One by one, everybody on the team walked over to Luis and shook his hand before getting onto the bus. Then we left him there, practically in tears, standing by himself in the hotel lobby. It was awful.

It was more than awful. In Tiant's mind it was outrageous, because he knew he could still pitch effectively. Now he wondered if he'd ever get the chance to prove that again.

The rest, of course, is history. The Braves took a brief look at him on their Richmond farm, then turned him away. The Red Sox, intrigued by what they had seen of him in that brief International League tryout, asked him to stop by their Louisville ballpark. He signed on, worked on his conditioning, and 20 days later was called up to Fenway Park.

From 1972, the year he broke into the starting rotation, through 1976, Luis won 99 games for the Red Sox, a five-year record unmatched in Boston history since Cy Young won 138 from 1901 through 1905!

But Luis didn't just win; he won with style, with flair, with what's come to be known as charisma. His contortions and dramatic motions on the mound were both the delight of the paying customers and the absolute dismay of opposing batters.

Probably no one was happier to have Tiant in a Boston uniform than Carl Yastrzemski, if only because it meant Yaz no longer had to face the mysterious El Tiente.

"Speed, plain speed, doesn't bother hitters," Carl says. "At least it's never bothered me. But Luis comes at you from all angles and throws your timing off. There's no place you can look at and know that's where the ball will be coming from. He's so herky-jerky out there, plus he hides the ball so well, that he keeps you guessing until the very last second. And you can't hit well if your concentration is bothered like that. Luis is the only guy who could do that to me, game after game."

Luis reigned supreme in Boston in those big winning seasons, highlighted of course by his 1975 World Series heroics, but he never forgot some of the lessons he had picked up along the way.

"I'd lose a game and people would say I was easy-going because I didn't blow my top," he explains. "They thought I could lose and forget it, but they were wrong. I didn't forget it. I hated to lose. But I knew I couldn't yell at the man who left runners on base, or the man who made an error behind me. They don't yell at me when I give up a home run, do they? You do your best, and as long as you know everybody else is doing that, too, you can't get mad when things go wrong. Back in Cleveland I had to pitch shutouts if I wanted to win, so I learned a long time ago that some things are just out of our hands."

But the 1978 season is very definitely in his hands. A faithful winter program of running and dieting saw Tiant go to spring training six pounds lighter than his normal playing weight.

He says he feels good today. He feels strong. He feels confident.

In short, he does not feel like a man who can't get the job done any more.

"This is going to be a very good team," he predicts. "There's a lot of talent here, and a lot of great competitors, like Yaz, Fisk, Burleson and Torrez. The Red Sox should be as good as any team in baseball."

And Tiant?

"The old Tiant is coming back," he says. "People have tried to bury me before, but I keep fooling them. I'm not dead yet. Don't believe what you hear and what you read. Just believe what you see. I'm going to be a winner again."

BASEBALL NUTS!

PEANUTS

As the Managers see it .

BLUE JAYS — Roy Hartsfield — There are several very important things that are going to make the Blue Jays more competitive this season than they were in 1977. We have acquired a few players that I feel will greatly help our ballclub.

Free agent Luis Gomez and the purchase of first baseman Tommy Hutton from Philadelphia gives us the nucleus of what may well turn out to be one of the best defensive infields in the league. I think Hutton was the best first baseman in the National League and the only question in my mind about Gomez is just how much he can hit. With Roy Howell coming along at third base, the only big question mark is at second base. Because no matter who we play at shortstop, Gomez, Hector Torres, Dave McKay, or Tim Nordbrook, we're going to get good defense. Behind the plate, I think we're as strong defensively as any club in the league. Alan Ashby and Rick Cerone both did a tremendous job for us.

Bob Bailor is the kind of player that could play anywhere and still be the best on the field. He'll probably be in centerfield, and I expect we'll see an even better year from him than the one he had last year.

Al Woods had a fine year too, hitting .284, and Steve Bowling and Gary Woods both came on strong later in the year.

I'm happy with our pitching staff. Bill Singer's injury last June left us in hot water but it gave youngsters like Jim Clancy and Jeff Byrd some valuable experience. Tom Underwood was one of the better young lefthanders in the National League, and there's no question that he'll help us.

BREWERS — George Bamberger — I really think the Milwaukee Brewers will be a team that can play .500 ball or better in 1978. We have a fine hitting team and I think the only thing our pitching staff lacks is experience.

I think youngsters like Jerry Augustine, Moose Haas, Larry Sorensen and Gary Beare can do a fine job for us with their ability and the experience they gained last season. Eduardo Rodriguez is going to be given the opportunity to be the stopper every team needs in the bullpen and Bill Castro, last year's ace with 13 saves, Bob McClure (6 saves, 2.52 ERA) and Mike Caldwell give us additional strength in the pen.

Ray Fosse, a hard-hitting veteran, Buck Martinez, a fine defensive catcher, and Charlie Moore, last year's starting receiver will battle for the number one catcher's role, while veteran backstops Andy Etchebarren and Larry Haney will fight for the number three spot.

We have excellent flexibility in the infield with Don Money being able to play third or second, Robin Yount, one of the major's fine young shortstops, slick-fielding Lenn Sakata, slugging Sal Bando and Cecil Cooper, a bonafide .300 hitter giving us the nucleus of a good infield.

The American League's RBI leader in 1977, Larry Hise, Sixto Lezcano, a young man who hit 21 homers in only 109 games last year, and Ben Oglivie, another slugger with home run power (21) lead the outfield candidates. Von Joshua, Jim Wohlford (17 stolen bases), Steve Brye (7 homers) and Dick Davis, a .355 hitter in the Pacific Coast League last year, will make the outfield battle interesting.

INDIANS — Jeff Torborg — My outlook for the Indians of 1978 is one of optimism, knowing full well the strength of the Yankees, Red Sox and Orioles, and the improvement of the Tigers and Brewers.

The basis for our optimism can be found in players such as Buddy Bell (.292, 64 rbi) and Duane Kuiper (.277, team high 169 hits), our two co-captains who had outstanding years offensively and defensively at third base and second, respectively.

Our shortstop situation is an interesting one because of the acquisition this winter of Tom Veryzer and Dave Rosello.

Behind the plate we are solid with Fred Kendall and Ron Pruitt. Freddy is a pitchers' catcher, who handles a staff superbly; Pru (.288) can play anywhere and hits anywhere he plays.

Our outfield was decimated by injuries last summer. The return of Rick Manning and Johnny Grubb is a major reason for our high hopes for 1978. Returning to centerfield is Manning, a Gold Glove winner in 1976. Grubb is a proven .300 hitter and should solidify the middle of our lineup.

Paul Dade (.291, 16 SB) had a super first year in 1977. He was our best leadoff man, and he will play somewhere because he is an offensive catalyst.

Pitching, so often referred to as the "name of the game," is also an Indian strongpoint. We will begin spring training with a starting rotation of Wayne Garland (13-19, 3.60 ERA), Dennis Eckersley (14-13, 3.53 ERA), Don Hood (2-1, 3.00 ERA) and Rick Waits (9-7, 4.00 ERA). The fifth spot is open with Al Fitzmorris, Pat Dobson and Sid Monge all available.

the 1978 Season

ORIOLES — Earl Weaver — We think we will be solid contenders again this year by the proper blending of our veterans and talented young players. Our pitching looks good again. Jim Palmer, a 20-game winner for the seventh time, and Mike Flanagan, who won 13 of his last 15 decisions, give us a strong right-left, 1-2 punch.

We picked up two righthanders from the Expos — Don Stanhouse and Joe Kerrigan. They figure to give us some badly needed depth in the bullpen.

The same infield will be back. Eddie Murray, the rookie of the year, will start at first with either Billy Smith or Rich Dauer at second. Mark Belanger, and Kiko Garcia will be our shortstops and Doug DeCinces, will be at third.

This leaves the designated hitter role in the capable hands of Lee May who has averaged 102 rbi and 24 home runs in his three seasons in Baltimore.

The third and seventh leading hitters in the American League in 1977 will be in our starting outfield — Ken Singleton (.328) in right and Al Bumbry (.317) in center.

Behind the plate we have two strong-armed catchers in Dave Skaggs and Rick Dempsey who will be trying to win the starting job.

RED SOX — Don Zimmer — I think we really strengthened ourselves in the off-season. By getting Jerry Remy, Mike Torrez, Dick Drago and Tom Burgmeier.

Behind the plate, Pudge Fisk had a great year in 1977 in every phase of the game and this year we anticipate more of the same.

In the infield we have George Scott at first, Remy at second, Rick Burleson at shortstop and Hobson at third. Scott gave us the right-handed extra power we needed last year and he's still a tremendous fielder. Remy is my kind of player and has the quickness we lacked on the bases. He and Burleson ought to give us excellent defense and a good one-two batting combination.

On paper our outfield is the equal of any in baseball. Yaz, Lynn and Evans are all Gold Glove winners. Rice is the most dangerous right-handed power hitter in the league. He'll be the DH, but will also get some work in the outfield.

Luis Tiant will have a big year. I really believe that. And Torrez, Bill Lee, Paxton, Reggie Cleveland and Rick Wise should join with Tiant for a strong starting staff.

Even though Bill Campbell had a great year in 1977 I think our bullpen will be even better with Drago, Stanley, Burgmeier and Willoughby waiting in the wings.

TIGERS — Ralph Houk — I feel good about the Tigers' chances for improvement in 1978.

Lance Parrish, Milt May and John Wockenfuss give us great strength behind the plate.

At first base, Thompson should be a fixture for years to come. It's only a matter of time until Whitaker and Trammell take over at second and shortstop — but, in the meantime, there's Steve Dillard at second and Mark Wagner, who hit .306 at Evansville, at shortstop.

At third base, Aurelio Rodriguez still has the best glove in the league while Phil Mankowski will give him an argument, perhaps on a platoon basis.

Steve Kemp in left field is one of the most aggressive hitters I've ever seen. LeFlore in centerfield is approaching his peak while in rightfield I want to see more of Tim Corcoran, a most promising left-handed hitter, and Spikes, who hits from the other side.

Staub, of course, has a lock position on designated hitter.

Mark Fidrych, seemingly completely recovered from his arm problem, Dave Rozema, who was splendid last season, and Jim Slaton, a crafty, experienced right-hander, can expect to hold down three of the starting jobs.

YANKEES — Billy Martin — I feel good about the 1978 Yankees, and once again I see us taking it all. The one thing that we have to watch out for this year is complacency. Winning the World Series once should not be enough, the true champion should defend his title.

With the addition of Gossage and Eastwick in the bullpen, we've strengthened our club overall, and now have what might be the best bullpen in the history of baseball, anchored by our Cy Young winner Sparky Lyle.

It will be good to have Ron Guidry in the starting rotation from the beginning of the season to go along with Don Gullett and Ed Figueroa. Our pitching staff takes an even deeper look when I see all the good young arms we've got in our organization. Gil Patterson, Jim Beattie, Ken Clay and Steve Taylor.

The team is basically set at the other positions and we should be okay if we can get equally productive years out of our players. With a year in New York under his belt now, I'm looking for more good things from Reggie Jackson.

Spell Relief

CAMPBELL - LYLE - FINGERS - SUTTER

Bill Campbell of the Boston Red Sox, winner of the 1977 Roloids Relief Man Award in the American League, and Rollie Fingers of the San Diego Padres, the big Roloids Relief Man in the National League, traveled virtually the same road to reach the top of their craft.

Both were born in the midwest, Campbell in Highland Park, Michigan, and Fingers in Steubenville, Ohio.

Both are righthanders.

Both were starters in the minor leagues, as well as in their early days in the majors.

Both found out that while their arms weren't suited for complete nine-inning jobs, their arms were resilient enough to pitch in short takes almost every day.

And both, of course, sport mustaches, although Finger's handlebar affair may be somewhat more eye-arresting.

To be sure, there were some variations in their paths to the heights. Campbell goes for the fast ball and screw ball. Fingers focuses on the sinker.

Campbell needs a longer warmup. Fingers can get ready in a hurry.

Both, incidentally, began their major league careers in the American League, Campbell with the Minnesota Twins and Fingers with the Oakland Athletics. The re-entry draft brought a change, however. While Campbell remained in the American League by joining the Red Sox, Fingers signed with the Padres to enter the "other" league.

The Roloids Relief Man Award is decided on a unique point system which credits relief pitchers with two points for each victory and two points for each save, while deducting one point for each loss. The competition is sponsored by Major League Baseball Promotion Corporation in conjunction with Roloids.

Campbell won in the American League with a total of 79 points on a record of 13 wins, nine losses and 31 saves. The Red Sox super-star topped none other than the New York Yankees' Sparky Lyle, who had 73 points on 13 wins, five losses and 26 saves.

Fingers was involved in an equally hot race in the N. L., outscoring the Chicago Cubs' Bruce Sutter, 77 points to 73. Fingers had eight wins and nine losses to go with his 35 saves against Sutter's seven victories, three defeats and 31 saves. Rollie's 35 saves were the most in the majors.

Campbell had a big year in general. The Red Sox, who finished 15½ games out in 1976 and never were a factor in the pennant race, were in the battle up to the last week in 1977, winding up only two and a half games behind the victorious Yankees, getting that close mainly through Campbell's rescue work.

The Red Sox won a total of 97 games and Campbell, with his 13 successes and 31 saves, had a say in 45 percent of them.

The Boston reliever laughs when he recalls how he got into the fireman business.

"I had a couple of bad starts, early bombings, and was used in relief," Campbell says. "It's a funny thing, but I learned that it was easier for me to pitch a few innings every day than work once every fourth or fifth day."

"As a starter I used to worry whether my arm would be strong enough when it came my turn to pitch. But on relief I found the arm has far more resiliency than I ever expected."

Campbell's high for successive days of pitching is five.

What would happen if he were to be given a start now?

"I would be shocked, to say the least," the Beantown ace replies. "But I would give it a try."

For all his ability to pitch whenever asked, Campbell needs a little longer warmup than most fellow bullpen workers. "I can't do it in ten pitches, like some fellows can," he says. "For me, 18 to 20 throws is more like it."

This makes two-for-two Roloids Relief Man Awards for Campbell. The competition was initiated in 1976 and Campbell won it while pitching for the Twins.

"I sure was thrilled to win it again," he pointed out. "The trophy is a beautiful thing, made of sterling silver in the design of a fireman's hat. It's the most beautiful trophy I ever received."

Fingers was a starter for a somewhat longer period than Campbell. "In fact in my third season with Oakland, I made the team as the fourth starter under Hank Bauer, our manager at that time," Rollie relates. "But I found I couldn't go nine innings. I'd get knocked out early."

It was Dick Williams, when he became manager of the A's, who put Fingers on relief on a permanent basis.

"I remember when it happened," Fingers says. "We were playing the Yankees in New York and fell behind, 13-3 early. Then we started to catch up and by the ninth inning, we actually went ahead. Williams called on me to pitch the bottom of the ninth. I stopped 'em and from then on I was on relief."

"Oh, I still had a few starts here and there, but my regular home was the bullpen. I think my last start came in 1973 when I was a spot starter. I went six innings and was the losing pitcher, 1-0. I've never started again."

If Rollie were asked to start now, he'd be against it. "My arm is stronger when I pitch every day. When I was a starter, waiting four days for my next outing didn't help my arm one bit."

Rollie once pitched in nine straight games. Last year, he got into six in a row.

When the phone rings in the bullpen, Fingers doesn't need much time to tune up. "Unless it's a cold or windy day, nine or ten pitches can do it," he insists.

The Padres didn't do too well in 1977, finishing 'way down in the National League West, but it was hardly Fingers' fault. The Padres won only 69 games, but Rollie was involved in 43 of them with his eight wins and 35 saves, a whopping 62 percent of the total.

Sparky Lyle, who made such a good battle of it himself for Roloids Relief Man honors, has only the highest praise for both winners.

"The best relief pitchers are all good competitors and these two fellows are pretty tough fighters," the Yankees' wonder boy says.

To go along with Sparky — Campbell and Fingers are two of a kind.

He Had to Shoot for His Supper

Mike Torrez became an instant millionaire when he was signed as a free agent by the Red Sox and if this isn't the climax of a rags-to-riches saga then nothing can be. Torrez has come a long, long way from the days of his youth when he literally had to shoot for his supper.

Torrez, a tall, dark and handsome product of Topeka, Kan., came from a poor, although not impoverished, family. Ever since he started playing professional baseball some 13 years ago, the 31-year old hero of last year's New York Yankees World Series victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers has been looking for a baseball home.

He feels he's finally found it in Fenway Park.

"The big reason I signed with the Red Sox was for the security I received," Torrez said. "After all the times I had traveled to so many different teams, I just felt that the next stop I wanted to be my last one."

Those baseball fans who might resent the big-money contracts free agents have been getting the last few years certainly have to have second thoughts when thinking of Michael Augustine Torrez. To say that Torrez has paid his dues in achieving his lofty financial peak is putting it rather mildly.

"I didn't have it exactly easy as a kid growing up," Torrez said. "I guess you might say I came from a poor family. In fact, my folks are still poor."

"When I was a kid, I used to go hunting with my oldest brother all the time," Torrez went on. "We hunted for everything, rabbits, quail, pheasants, deer. There was one time we went out and came back with 103 pheasants."

"I guess you know that the Torrez family ate a lot of pheasant for the next month or so. There were many, many times that the game we shot and brought home supplied the food for our table."

Torrez broke into the major leagues with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1967. Since then, this quiet-spoken right hander has also been with Montreal, Baltimore, Oakland and New York.

He was asked why he thought he had traveled so much in baseball.

"It's been a matter of circumstances but it's been a frustrating thing for me. Especially when you've gone somewhere and done a pretty good job for an organization, you want to get settled. But it seems I've never been that lucky."

"It's always been a case of a club needing some hitting and another club needing some pitching and it seems like I've always been a guy in the middle."

"When I was in Montreal, the club was knocked because it didn't have any left-handed pitching. The Baltimore club was after Ken Singleton and Montreal wanted Dave McNally and Coggins. The next thing I knew I was in Baltimore."

"Then the same thing happened in Baltimore," he went on. "I won those 20 games and we ended up a couple of games back of Boston in '75 but then the Orioles decided they didn't have enough hitting so they went and got Reggie Jackson from Oakland and I ended up in the deal."

"In Oakland, it was a different situation. I told Charley (Finley) I was going to leave when I played out my option. I told him it would be best to trade me and get some players for me. I was honest with him. I wouldn't have minded playing for the A's but he'd lost all his players. He just didn't have a good ball club any more."

"That's really the way it's been, people wanting different type of players, pitchers, hitters. Just a matter of circumstances."

Shoot For His Supper

Torrez found himself with the Yankees in late April last season after a deal involving Dock Ellis. His arrival in the Big Apple could have been the happy end of the line for Big Mike but it wasn't. He pitched marvelously but he never really found professional peace of mind.

"I wasn't signed, of course, when I got to New York," Mike said. "And I never felt the Yankees really tried to keep me. I did a pretty good job for them and yet they never did go out of their way to try to sign me."

Torrez found out some of the hard facts of life at an early age — at an age when he was pitching American Legion ball in his native Topeka.

"I had a job in a gas station," he recalled with a grin. "I used to pump gas from 11 o'clock at night to seven in the morning. Then I'd go home and sleep until 11 and get up and throw baseballs all afternoon."

"I made enough money working in the gas station, mowing lawns and things like that to take care of myself. I never really wanted for too much. Just about the only thing I think I ever really wanted from the time I was seven or eight years old was to be a baseball player."

"My last year in Legion ball I had a 13-1 record with an under 1.00 earned run average. I used to go see a lot of the Kansas City A's games. It was only a 45 minute drive from Topeka to K.C. and I got down there a lot.

"I remember saying to myself 'hell, I can throw harder than these guys and that really gave me the mental push I needed to keep trying. Now I'm glad it worked out the way it has.'"

Torrez admitted that taking part in last year's Yankee triumph was truly a great thrill for him but he's still looking forward to greater heights.

"Last year was a great experience," Torrez allowed. "I just wish that every player who has ever played in the major leagues could play in a World Series because it's such a great feeling. It's too bad that there are a lot of great players that never do get to play in a series."

"But what I think would be an even greater thrill for me if I could help out in a little way to bring a world championship to Boston. New York hadn't won it all in some 15 years but Boston hasn't won in 60 years and to be part of the 25 players who bring a championship to Boston I think would be all I could ever ask for."

The Red Sox and their legion of fans will drink to that!

Schenley O.F.C. The Seasoned Pro.

Sure, O.F.C. is in a league by itself. But it didn't get there in one season. O.F.C. is matured for eight full years, the aging period for a prime Canadian.

And it's not only distilled and aged in Canada but blended and bottled there too. So 86.8 proof is a statistic you can count on. With a taste that's as smooth as a hitter's follow-through.

When it comes to performance, O.F.C. is always a crowd-pleaser.

Red Sox on TV

Dick Stockton and Ken Harrelson team up for their fourth year telecasting some 93 Red Sox games through WSBK-TV, Channel 38 in Boston and feeding a New England-wide network. Stockton, heard frequently on network telecasts of football, hockey and basketball, and "The Hawk", one of the most popular Red Sox players of recent years, have become an interesting and informative team in the past three seasons.
